- Close student/faculty interaction is encouraged, both in the classroom and through the theme-oriented “residential colleges”

Particularly Strong Programs:
- Visual & performing arts, foreign languages, political science, anthropology, economics, environmental science, and creative writing
- An exceptionally competitive engineering program is built within the structure of the liberal arts, and, with a new state-of-the-art science building, students also have opportunities for individual research
- New arts facility and athletic complex enables the university to compete more aggressively for student artists and athletes

Admission:
- Very Selective—40% of applicants admitted

- In making decisions, the committee seeks a talented and diverse student body and considers the following:
  - Course of study, grades, and test scores
  - The application, essay, personal qualities and activities
  - Recommendations and interviews
  - The institution’s own needs as it shapes the incoming class

- The following profile for admitted students is numerically-based only and does not take into consideration personal qualities and attributes that are inherent in the final decision:
